Options Autism (5) Limited

Monitoring visit

Inspected under the social care common inspection framework

Information about this children's home

This service provides care for children and young people who have autism spectrum conditions. The children and young people may also have additional medical and/or complex needs.

This setting is an independent residential special school registered as a children's home. It is owned and operated by a private company. The service offers specialised education, and care for up to five children at present. Some young people stay until they have completed their education at age 19 years.

The registered manager resigned on 30 November 2020. The deputy manager is in day-to-day charge of the home and is in the process of undertaking her registration with Ofsted.

Due to COVID-19 (coronavirus), at the request of the Secretary of State, we suspended all routine inspections of social care providers on 17 March 2020.

We undertook a monitoring visit on 4 February 2021 and the report is published on Ofsted's website. We undertook a full inspection on 4 and 5 August 2021 and this received a provisional judgement of inadequate, subject to quality assurance and a further monitoring visit on 9 August 2021.

Inspection date: 18 August 2021

This monitoring visit

At the full inspection, the home was suspended due to serious and widespread failings that compromised children's safety. Senior managers from the organisation communicated with Ofsted that they had put measures in place to safeguard children and invited Ofsted to reconsider the need to suspend the service. On 9 August 2021, Ofsted returned to the setting to review works undertaken. As a result of this visit, Ofsted lifted the suspension notice and imposed a condition on the home's registration to reduce the number of children from 22 to five. Four compliance notices were also raised following this monitoring inspection. The purpose of this visit is to monitor progress and children's welfare.

Leadership and management at the home are poor. Managers do not know what is happening for children on a day-to-day basis and this does not support improvement in children's experiences, progress and safety.

Despite additional safety measures to reduce the risks associated with children climbing fences, there has been a further incident. This raises questions about staff supervision of children. Although the incident was referenced in a child's daily record, managers were unaware of this matter until inspectors raised it with them. As a result, managers were unclear what, if any, action had been taken to understand what had happened and to try and prevent the same thing happening again.

Restraint practice is poor. Staff physically move children to different areas of the home to try and manage behaviour. On one occasion, staff shut a distressed child in the soft playroom while a staff member sought help. The child was then moved into the basketball court and locked in there with staff. As a result of poor behaviour management, the child had to be given medication to help him calm down. Behaviour management techniques, including the use of restraint and medication, are inappropriate and disproportionate. This leaves children vulnerable to the risk of harm.

Oversight of restraint incidents is ineffective. Managers are not identifying issues of concern as outlined above. Children are not receiving a debrief to check on their welfare and for managers to understand their views about what happened. In addition, staff are continuing to use techniques that they are not trained in. Failure to recognise poor behaviour management practice limits the scope for improvement and this continues to compromise children's welfare and safety.

One child's records showed that he had a bruise and another child's records detailed a health issue. The child is receiving medication for the health issue, but this is not being recorded by staff. Managers did not know about these issues until inspectors asked about them. Only then did managers explore what had happened and what this may mean for children. A lack of monitoring means that potential safeguarding and welfare issues are not identified and addressed.

Managers have not ensured that an agency nurse has a suitable disclosure and barring check that included being vetted against the children's barred list. This means that they have not taken steps to ensure that agency staff have been recruited safely. This issue was rectified immediately after the inspection.

Direction for staff about how to manage daily routines is lacking. For example, staff do not routinely make children's beds or ask them what they would like for lunch. Children are given sandwiches that they don't like and then staff make them something else. This shows a lack of planning and thought for children's wishes.

Despite the shortfalls identified at this inspection, some positives were noted. Extensive work is under way to improve the home environment for children and bedrooms are being extensively refurbished and redecorated. Staff are continuing to undertake training to develop the skills they need to care for children. In addition, children have had some positive experiences. For example, a child enjoyed baking cakes with staff and another enjoyed a drive out to a fast-food restaurant.

Ofsted will continue to monitor the situation at the home. The requirements raised at recent inspections, including the four compliance notices, will be reviewed at future inspections.
